

Rules which govern the afferent to European Reference Center on Surface Science and Technology

Public and private entities within the European Community (companies, institutions, industries, research centers and universities) which have plants and/or qualified laboratories regarding surface science (the study of surface properties and their changes) can apply a part to a “European Reference Center” on surface science.

The qualification of the “European Reference Center” on surface science allows to increase, improve and promote the interaction between those who have significant experience and expertise within the Materials Surface Science and Technology.

Applications can be sent through the form on the website.

Suitability assessment is entrusted to the Technical Scientific Committee of the Association referred to Article 21 of the bylaws.

The “European Reference Centers” should not have to pay any additional fee to those provided to enter the Association referred to Article 5 of the bylaws.